Opposes changes to Law of Return

Canadian Jewish Congress to join effort on 'who's a Jew'

By Belinda Silberman
TORONTO — Canadian Jewish Congress will join a coalition of other North American organizations in opposing changes to Israel's Law of Return.

Members of national executive committee agreed at a recent meeting to take part in the campaign after committee member Donald Carr told them, "it's an issue that Canadian Jewish Congress cannot afford to duck."

The Law of Return — which permits Jews to immigrate to Israel and receive immediate citizenship — recently received international attention when the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party sponsored three amendments enabling the Israeli Rabbinic Court to reject the Jewish conversions of some individuals applying for citizenship.

The issue of conversions is controversial because the Law of Return defines a Jew as anyone who is born to a Jewish mother or who has undergone a Jewish conversion. There is no definition in the law on what constitutes a conversion.

On July 8 the Knesset rejected two of the Shas amendments. A third was withdrawn by Shas on July 29, the date it was scheduled to be heard.

Prior to the third amendment's withdrawal, a high-level delegation of North American Jewish leaders — including representatives from the United Israel Appeal of Canada — spoke to the Knesset, voicing their opposition to the changes.

The action was taken by the North American group to "sensitize" the Israeli politicians and public to the issue, Carr said in an interview.

At the CJC meeting, Carr — who along with UJA of Canada executive vice-president Walter Hess took part in the delegation — reported on the coalition's efforts, concluding his remarks by asking the CJC to join.

Press for changes

The coalition, led by the New York-based Council of Jewish Federations, will continue to press for two changes to The Law of Return.

Although the matter has already been dealt with by the Israeli government, it could be brought back before the Knesset when it reconvenes later this fall, Carr told The CJN.

Congress was not asked to join in the CJC's summer delegation, because the CJC's July meeting — set up to decide what action would be taken — was called on very short notice.

Carr, who is honorary legal counsel for UJA of Canada, said the CJC asked the UJA of Canada to participate because it has "natural ties" with the CJC. Like the UJA, many of the CJC's activities revolve around fundraising.

The inclusion of CJC in the coalition will aid in future efforts to prevent The Law of Return from being amended, he said.

"It means that the voice of Canadian Jewry will now be added to all the other organizations of the United States in following up on the program and to hopefully continue with this issue," Carr told The CJN.

During his report he told the more than 50 people at the CJC meeting that to the average Israeli, The Law of Return is a "non-issue."

Carr later explained in an interview Israelis do not distinguish between the Reform and Conservative movements, since in Israel people are considered "either Orthodox or nothing."

Israelis also have little interest in The Law of Return because it doesn't affect them — they're already citizens of the Jewish state.

As a result, one of the decisions of the delegation was to urge North American Jewish organizations to mount a public relations program in Israel to inform citizens of the importance of the issue.

Carr said it was also felt the question of "Who is a Jew" shouldn't be dealt with by the Knesset.

"For the Knesset to start interpreting who is a Jew puts them into the arena where they are starting to interpret Jewish religious laws and the Knesset is not a religious body," Carr said.

Communities across Canada join protest over slight to Jerusalem

By Wendy Rosen

OTTAWA — This city's Jewish community is joined by others across Canada in protesting Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek's exclusion from full participation in an international conference of mayors of capital cities to be held here Oct. 20-23.

However, the mayor of Tripoli in Libya has been invited, despite the fact the Canadian government, which is contributing $200,000, to the conference, has a policy of not inviting Libyan delegations to conferences it sponsors.

Conference organizer Mayor James Durrell, of Ottawa, formed a steering committee, which included an official from the federal department of external affairs.

Floated compromise

Durrell and his staff met with a 6-man delegation from the Jewish Community Council about a month ago and "floated" a compromise which was deemed to be unacceptable.

Council president Stepbro Victor said the deal was that Kollek would be invited to be a guest speaker — in addition to capital city mayors, mayors of "great cities" have been invited either to be observers or guest speakers — if "we would guarantee Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat would come as Israel's official representative."

(An invitation originally went to Lahat who sent it back with the explanation that Jerusalem, not Tel Aviv, is the capital of Israel. However, Canada does not recognize Jerusalem's status.)

"We told him we'd get back to him — we made it clear we would put forward the compromise," Victor said, adding that it was sent to the Israeli ambassador in Ottawa to forward to Israel. The answer rejecting the deal — "Israel was emphatic that only the mayor of Jerusalem should be invited — came about a month later through the same channels."

"We told him (Durrell) he was making a mistake, that it was offensive to the Jewish community not to have the mayor of Jerusalem invited."

Reiterated points

Victor and council past president Gerald Berger reiterated these points when they met with Durrell a second time to convey Israel's decision.

"We told him that the Jewish community (in Canada and elsewhere) will hold the city of Ottawa responsible to which he said he was just following the guidelines of external affairs," Victor said.

"He refused to bend on the issue. If we had known about Libya, we might have taken a different, an even stronger approach."

It was revealed last week that the Canadian embassy in Rome on behalf of Durrell invited Abdul Mejid Quad, the mayor of Tripoli who is also a senior Libyan cabinet minister. It is not known whether he will attend the conference, one of the themes of which is terrorism.

Victor said the slight to Jews and Israel is all the more offensive because "he goes ahead and invites the mayor of Tripoli" when the Canadian government has a policy of not inviting Libyan delegations to conferences it sponsors.

The Canada-Israel Committee has called the decision to exclude Kollek, who has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize "offensive."

National chairman Sidney Spivak says, "Serious questions must be raised about the judgment of the conference organizers who have extended invitations to mayors from countries known for their human rights abuses and support for terrorism, but not to the elected mayor of the capital of Israel."

"Jerusalem has been the site of continuous Jewish settlement and the focus of Jewish spiritual, cultural, and national life. Since the rebirth of the sovereign state of Israel in 1948, its capital city and the seat of its government has been in Jerusalem. To ignore this is to disregard reality. The city of Jerusalem is and will remain the capital of Israel," he said.

Spivak pointed to Kollek's role in restoring peace and tranquility to the city after centuries of turmoil and thus making it a model of co-existence among religious and ethnic communities.

"The government of Israel and the municipality of Jerusalem have been consistently committed to the rights of all religions to worship at their holy places. It is deeply regrettable that the wealth of experience that has been developed in Jerusalem and the extraordinary talents of its mayor will not be available to participants to the conference."

One of the several wonderful aspects of working in a Jewish milieu is the fact that, come a Yom Tov, the whole building closes down.

Especially wonderful are those holidays which fall on weekdays. Yum.

Unfortunately, however, after the fact one returns to a triple workload all of which has to be completed — at the very latest — yesterday.

But here we are, fresh out of Yom Tovim — Succot 5748 having been celebrated and tucked into memory — and looking ahead to a month of November replete with community events and functions to be enjoyed.

Hadassah-WIZO opens the month with its ever-popular Bazaar which takes place at the Civic Centre. This year, in a radical departure from the usual Wednesday timeslot, Bazaar will be held on Sunday, November 1. Lots of good things to buy, good things to eat, noise, games of chance and raffles to win. Fun for the whole family.

A week later, the Women's Auxiliary of Hillel Lodge hosts its 22nd Annual Fall Tea on Sunday, November 8 at the Lodge, 125 Wurttemberg Street. This group, which works tirelessly to better life for the residents at the lodge, also prepares some of the best tea munchies around. Plan to drop in and support their good work.

John and Gladys Greenberg are the deserving honorees at JNF's Negev Dinner on Wednesday, November 18. The choice of this popular, committed couple by the host organization will probably 'pack the house', so reserve your table now!

Saturday evening, November 21 and Sunday 22nd brings Arts Alive to this community...and what an impressive list of headliners they've got this year! Circle those dates on your calendar and plan to be there.

We may be out of Yom Tovim, but there's a raft of 'good days' ahead. Nothing grey about this November for Ottawa's Jewish community!

Lawrence Greenberg is elected Campus head

The annual meeting of the Ottawa Jewish Community Campus took place on Wednesday, September 30, as part of the first meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Ottawa Vaad Ha'Ir for the 1987-88 season.

Outgoing President Russell Kronick reported on the activities of the past year and reviewed the financial statement for the year ending June 30, 1987 which was approved by the members.

Past president Gerald Berger presented the proposed slate of the Board of Directors for 1987-88, which was unanimously accepted. The slate follows:

Allan Baker; Gerald Berger; Arnold Fradkin; Alfred Friedman; Geraldine Goldstein;

Lawrence Greenberg; Sheila Hartman; Sandra Hirshhorn; Russell Kronick; Stanley Levine; Ron Levitan; Charles Merovitz; Peter Pivko; Sol Shinder; Barbara Shore; Moishe Smith; Arnon Vered; Norman Zagerman.

At the first meeting of the Board of Directors of the Campus which took place immediately following the adjournment of the Board of Trustees meeting, the following were elected Officers of the Jewish Community Campus for 1987-88:

President: Lawrence Greenberg; Vice-President: Arnon Vered; Secretary: Geraldine Goldstein; Treasurer: Charles Merovitz.

Women Making a Difference

By Susannah Dalfen

Chairwoman, Women's Division, UJA '88

With the United Jewish Appeal campaign well underway and our Women's Division Kaleidoscope now over, it gives me great pleasure to think back over our activities of the past couple of weeks.

Kaleidoscope "Women Making a Difference"

It was a wonderful gathering. Sandra Levinson chaired this event with the support of Women's Division Associate Chairmen Lynda Greenberg. The food and decor for this program and all the other Women's Division events was cooked, catered and created by Myra Aronson, with some help from her friends. The evening program opened with The Honourable Chaviva Hosek, Minister of Housing in the newly elected Ontario government. A politician with a difference, a warm and highly engaging woman, Chaviva outlined her growth as a young Jewish woman identifying with her "tube" to that of the woman who identifies with the ongoing plight of women everywhere. Those of us present were touched by her personal charm, impressed by her knowledge and delighted to have the opportunity to learn from her.

At a very early morning breakfast, Alti Rodal spoke with great insight and thorough knowledge of the disturbing history of the Nazi's immigration into Canada. The audience was captivated, as the details unfolded of successive government's clumsy and occasionally outrageous handling of this issue. Many women present stayed on to learn more from this outstanding Jewish historian.

On Being Jewish and Female, a panel discussion, brought out a wide cross section of the women of the community. Sharon Gray in moderating the discussion, was able to bring her own experience to bear and highlight the points made so well by Sharon Wolfe who spoke of her journey from middle class bride whose great expectation for herself was to join the golf course to her current position as an advisory on the status of women to the Prime Minister. Helen Levine, talking from her perspective as an "outsider", shared how the Jewish and female streams had flowed through her life. An observant woman, Aviva Freedman, reminded women of the roles that are allocated to us through our various relationships and pondered over how we can make room for ourselves. The audience responded with enthusiasm to this stimulating and frank exchange of ideas and support.

After a fabulous morning, Dorothy Reitman was able, as our lunchtime speaker, to end Kaleidoscope with a powerful and engaging talk on her recent experiences in the Soviet Union uncovering what glasnost means to refuseniks. Most enthralling however, was the story Dorothy told of how her persistent efforts led to one refusenik's recent release from the Soviet Union. The difference Dorothy Reitman makes both communally and personally touched us all.

The Kaleidoscope program is over, but those of us who attended left feeling renewed energy and possibility as Jewish women — determined to make a contribution in whichever way we can both as individuals and collectively.

Pat Fleisher receiving the Lion of Judah Pin from Leadership Co-Chairmen Elissa Iny and Dorothy Nadolny. Ms. Fleisher joins a select group of women in the community who have contributed a minimum of $5000. to the Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal of Ottawa.

Shulamit Gur-Arieh, wife of the Ambassador to Israel joins the recipients of the Pomegranate Pin, Carol Greenberg, Rose Betcherman, Simone Goldberg, Bertha Palmer accepting on behalf of daughter Sunny Tavel, Susannah Dalfen, Elissa Iny, Gittel Tatz and Rose Taylor. Missing are Reesa Greenberg, Joyce Loeb, Myra Press, Zelaine Shinder and Ethel Taylor. This special pin representing the mitzvah of Tzedakah is awarded to dedicated women who have contributed from $2500. to $4999. to the 1988 Women's Division United Jewish Appeal Campaign.

Shades of Grey

By Rabbi Arnold Fine
Agudath Israel Congregation

Something very important happened in the Canadian and U.S. Jewish communities in the past few months. Old and accepted views were challenged and a new vision of the respective Jewish communities appeared. They may have great impact upon our Jewish societies, here and in Israel.

For the most part Zionism has been viewed as a political relationship between various groupings, often with social and economic doctrines, which reflected ideologies of the last century or opposition to them. Labour, socialism, free enterprise, government-private sector co-operation, as well as ethnic and religious views — are all represented by political parties, many of them in the Israeli Knesset and active in the Diaspora. Other special interest groups have also coalesced to fight for their special outlooks and demands causing the same methodology.

Only one religious grouping, Mizrahi, joined the Zionist movement in the early days of the Zionist congresses and its major plank was a provision for the needs of religious Jews. Mizrahi might be characterized as Modern Orthodoxy and includes free enterprisers, as well as socialists and all those in the middle.

Non-orthodox Zionists usually were satisfied with activity in one of the so-called secular parties. In the last decade or so that has changed, as the "non-religious" parties could not deliver the needs of the Conservative and Reform sectors of religious Jewry, despite their protestations. Now Conservative Jewry has MERCAZ, the Reform KADIMA, their own political Zionist parties. They came to this political resolution hesitantly and with pain, for they wanted to work through existing apparatus.

In the recent election for choosing representatives for the next Zionist Congress, we gained some insight into the new alignment of North American Jews. On both sides of the forty-ninth parallel, religious Jewry became important elements to be considered. Here, the United Torah Coalition (Orthodox), along with KADIMA (Reform) and MERCAZ (Conservative), gained a total of eleven delegates, becoming the dominant factors in Canadian Zionist circles. This gives the synagogues a loud and clear voice and we must use it carefully and well — to explain the concept of pluralism, the ability to have shades of grey in the religious spectrum and not just black and white, as most Israelis see it today, to their great peril.

The synagogues here are a vast repository of love, concern, support for and aliyah to the State of Israel. We see Israel in religious and not just political terms and we can and should be doing much. Our platforms will have to go beyond the demands for certain rights, which we should have, to the moral and political questions, which demand moderate religious input.

Perhaps we all can be an influential voice in helping Israel gain perspective on the religious problems, which now threaten to eat away at the society of the Israeli state. We, North Americans, have the experience, the sensitivity and the capability to show Israelis of all views how they might confront and overcome their present and future predicaments.

Shulamit Gur-Arieh And Special Friend

Shulamit Gur-Arieh, wife of the Ambassador of Israel to Canada, holds Bluma Chana Caytak, one of the youngest members of the Jewish Youth Library. Ambassador and Mrs. Gur-Arieh recently paid a visit to the Jewish Youth Library which is run under the guidance of the Lubavitcher Rebbe, Shlita.

Sephardic services spark group to celebrate holidays together

This year, for the first time in Ottawa, the Sephardic community held Sephardic services for Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur.

More than 70 Jews of all origins congregated and prayed according to the Sephardic Minhag. The services were held in a hall loaned to the group by the Labour Zionist Council of Ottawa. The Sephardim Torah used belongs to Congregation Beth Shalom and Young Israel. No rabbi officiated, no cantor sang, rather the service involved the wholehearted participation of all present. Each man was called to the Torah and an abundance of candidates offered to lead the service, read the Torah and the Haftarah and blow the Shofar.

The Kohanim blessed the congregants, and, during Nehila, the windows shook as the men covered their heads with the Taleth, and the beautiful oriental melody resonated in the hall. The final note of the Shofar brought tears to the eyes of many of the congregants.

The group has decided to form a Sephardic Congregation, with the immediate goal of holding social events and services for major holidays, such as Chanukah, Pesach and Lag B'Omer, and with the long-term objective of holding Shabbat services and celebrating simchot together. In this way it is hoped sumptuous Sephardic customs and rituals will be passed on to the children.

US orthodox join protest

NEW YORK (JTA) — Five major Orthodox organizations in the U.S. have issued a joint statement vigorously protesting what they called the "radical desecration" of the unique religious status of Jerusalem by the screening of films there on the Sabbath.

Their statement also condemned "the action of the minuscule group of irresponsible hotheads who stoop to stone-throwing in violation of Jewish law."

The latter reference apparently was to ultra-Orthodox residents of Jerusalem who have resorted to violence to force the closure of cinemas.

The statement was issued by the Agudath Israel of America, National Council of Young Israel, Rabbinical Council of America, Religious Zionists of America, and the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America.

It stressed that "Respect for the Sabbath was embodied even in the non-Jewish bylaws of Jerusalem under the British mandate which forbade Sabbath desecration in public facilities of the kind now being perpetrated."

Cutting the Mustard

Mustard is a staple — it's in everyone's pantry. And not just the kind you put on hotdogs.

There is smooth, coarse, hot, mild, wine, spice, herb-flavoured, French, English, etc....

For the calorie-conscious, mustard is certainly an easy way to add flavour without too many calories. Mustard is a protein with lots of minerals and vitamins.

According to Craig Claiborne in the New York Times Food Encyclopedia, mustard is the second most popular spice after pepper.

Mustard is best used for livening up sauces by adding a tangy taste.

Great Vinaigrette

1/3 cup white wine vinegar 1 tsp. dried oregano
1 T Dijon mustard black pepper

1/3 cup olive oil

Mix together all ingredients except oil. Now whisk in oil slowly.

Red Snapper with Lemon Champagne

Beurre Blanc

1-1/2 lb. red snapper filets 1 T lemon juice
2 T melted butter 2 tsp. Dijon mustard salt and pepper to taste 1/4 tsp. dill weed
1 cup dry champagne 6 T cold sweet butter

Brush fish with melted butter, salt and pepper. Bake at 375° for 15 min. In a saucepan over high heat reduce champagne and lemon juice to 1/2 cup. Add mustard and dill. Reduce heat to low. Whisk in 1 T cold butter till melted. Repeat with each T of butter. This causes the sauce to become creamy. Pour over baked fish and garnish with fresh dill. Serves 4.

Carrot "Spaghetti" au citron

3 carrots peeled and shredded 1 T spicy hot and sweet mustard
1 lemon halved lengthwise then cut into paper thin half circles 1/2 tsp. dill weed
Toss ingredients together and steam over boiling water 10 min. Serves 4.

Tangy Sweet Mustard

1/2 cup dry English mustard 2 eggs beaten
1/2 c. white sugar 1/2 c. cider vinegar
1/2 tsp. salt 1/2 c. water

2 T butter

Mix the dry mustard, sugar, salt in a saucepan. Beat the vinegar, eggs and water together in a small bowl. Add slowly to the dry ingredients in the saucepan, stirring to avoid lumps. Cook the mixture over medium heat till thick and smooth. Remove from heat. Add the butter in bits, stirring well. Cool. Pour into jars and refrigerate. Makes 1-1/2 cups.

French-style mustard

1/3 cup English dry mustard 1/4 tsp. salt
1 T sugar 2 eggs beaten

2/3 cup tarragon vinegar

In a small saucepan combine the mustard, sugar and salt. Combine the eggs with the vinegar and add slowly to the dry mixture, stirring constantly. Cook the mixture over moderate heat, till thick and smooth. Let cool. Pour into a jar and refrigerate. Makes 1 cup.

Dear Editor:

The time has come to take pen in hand and personally welcome our new JSU-Hillel Director Lorne Berk to Ottawa and wish him the very best of success in his new position.

I would also like to take this opportunity to give thanks, and acknowledge openly, the appreciation I have for two very fine people who will be leaving the Ottawa community some time this fall.

As a student involved with the JSU-Hillel in past years, one of the high points for me was to be able to work with people having the dedication, commitment, tact and 'seichel' as did Hilary Ingre, and her patient husband David.

Having worked closely with Hilary on a number of occasions, I was able to see firsthand just how seriously she took the responsibility of her position as JSU Director.

Most Jewish students in Ottawa do not realize what Hilary walked into when she took over some three years ago. JSU was on the verge of collapse spiritually, morally and financially. The attitude of the students was lukewarm at best and I know that Hilary had to endure more than one difficult situation as JSU Director; situations which some might say, pushed the Director's job description to its limits.

I can also recall many times when JSU students themselves were less than forthcoming in their willingness to help, but yet more than willing to criticize if the organization was not run according to their view of the world.

It is truly a simcha that many Jewish students are fortunate enough to be pampered throughout their high school years, myself included, but unfortunately this makes for some interesting attitudes come university, many of which must be dealt with by JSU Directors. Always competent and willing to help Jewish students, Hilary withstood all and, not to belittle those who did lend genuine support, literally rebuilt JSU-Hillel singlehandedly, for our benefit, in order to make it the successful organization it is today.

The credit is long overdue, and I believe I speak for many of us when I say that Hilary did a heck of a job, much of which was never acknowledged.

Display Kattan papers at Public Archives

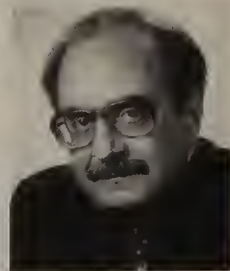

By Sharon Drache

The Public Archives of Canada currently offers an exhibition of some of the documents of Naim Kattan, author and head of the Writings and Publications Section of the Canada Council, whose personal papers and literary manuscripts were purchased this past spring.

Kattan, who was born in Iraq, studied at the Sorbonne in France before coming to Canada in 1954. Until he joined the Canada Council in 1967, he worked for the Canadian Jewish Congress in Montreal, editing Le Bulletin du Cercle Juif. His correspondence from this time includes letters from prominent Jewish figures such as Elie Weisel.

Kattan has written three highly autobiographical novels, Farewell Babylon, Paris Interlude and La Fiancée Promise (not yet translated into English), four collections of essays, four collections of short stories and three volumes of literary criticism. His book of essays, Reality and Theatre won the Prix France-Canada in 1971.

The Kattan papers in the National Archives contain original manuscript drafts of these works. There is also an extensive correspondence with letters from such celebrated writers as André Gide, who influenced Kattan's early literary career, and from Canadians Kattan met after settling in Canada in the mid 1950s, including Hugh MacLennan, Margaret Laurence and Mordecai Richler.

Inquiries concerning the Naim Kattan papers in the National Archives should be directed to the Manuscript Division, National Archives of Canada, 395 Wellington Street, Ottawa, but the small exhibition of documents currently on display on the third floor is open to the general public and provides a good opportunity to catch a glimpse of one of our most distinguished Canadian literary figures.

Journalists being invited to submit story proposals

The Fund for Journalism on Jewish Life invites experienced and promising journalists in the United States and in Canada to submit proposals for an investigative piece, a feature story, or essay, on a topic of their choice on Jewish issues.

Applications should include:
• a research proposal, • a budget for research expenses, • samples of previous work.

Designed to deepen and broaden the coverage of Jewish issues around the world, the program will fill the current gap in serious investigative and first-hand reporting in the American and Canadian Jewish press.

An independent selection/advisory committee will review proposals and award grants. In addition, the committee may assign investigative or feature stories to individuals chosen from the list of journalists who submitted their proposal.

The committee is co-chaired by Gary Rosenblatt, Editor of The Baltimore Jewish Times and Detroit Jewish News, and Leon Wieseltier, Literary Editor, The New Republic.

Applications may be obtained by writing or telephoning The Administrator, The Fund for Journalism on Jewish Life, P.O. Box 65069, Baltimore, Maryland 21209, (301) 484-6002.

The Fund for Journalism on Jewish Life is supported by a grant from The CRB Foundation of Montreal, Canada.

Producer Moses Znaimer is as fascinating as his characters

By Herbert G. Luft
HOLLYWOOD (JTA) — Moses Znaimer, the world's most inventive theatrical entrepreneur, is the producer of the three-dimensional, participatory and interactive show Tamara, which sends audiences scurrying after 10 characters throughout the spacious villa Il Vittoriale. Actually, the site for 41-month run has been the refurbished American Legion Post here.

The audience members are trying to witness one day's affairs d'amour and political chicanery by the aging Gabriele D'Annunzio, forerunner of Benito Mussolini but also Italy's foremost poet and playwright at the turn of the century.

Educated at McGill

Znaimer himself is as fascinating a personality as the characters in his living movie.

A Jewish boy, whose parents fled across Asiatic Russia to escape the Nazis, he was born in Kulak, Tajikistan, grew up in Montreal, and was educated at McGill and Harvard universities.

He lives in Toronto, where he is head of Canada's innovative and popular independent television station CTV, and MuchMusic and MusiquePlus, Canada's only satellite television music channels in English and French.

Throughout his colourful career, he has been a network radio and television producer, director and host. He also worked as an analyst and manager for Helix Investment, Canada's largest venture capital pool.

Before picking up Tamara at the 1981 Toronto Theatre Festival, where the show received five major awards, he produced Miss Margarita and Travesties.

Earlier still he appeared as an actor in the motion pictures Atlantic City and The Best Revenge.

In his spare time today, he involves himself in sports and flies a twin-engine airplane.

Tamara continues in Los Angeles and Mexico City. Znaimer told this columnist that he aims at a permanent base for his three dimensional, interacting plays.

When Tamara has run its course, he'll seek new stories in the same vein, with layers within layers, multiple, simultaneous action on various levels.

Plans to travel

Eventually, Znaimer plans to take his living theatre to Europe; to London, Paris and Rome.

Znaimer mentioned another daring project which he meanwhile initiated at his homebase of Toronto, a new spectacle that lets the theatre-goer actually participate.

Tour of the Universe, now at the CN Tower in Toronto, involves an elaborate simulation of a SpacePort and Sight-seeing flight to the planet Jupiter 50 years into the future.

Some 3,000 people a day buy tickets for the spacecraft, going through customs and immigration.

Thousands partake

While less than 200 people view Tamara in one performance, thousands everyday switch from viewer to participant in Tour.

Znaimer has big plans to revolutionize the theatre and merge the screen with the living stage. He also aims to give his production a deep meaning whether he deals with the past or the distant future of mankind.

In Tamara, the flippancy behaviour of the participants in the pre-war epic holds a warning for the future. The fascists are exposed in all their ruthless machinations, and the bystanders to the tragedy are castigated for their cowardice.

Tour of the Universe is not one of the studio tourist attraction, but an appraisal of mankind's future, a compassionate appeal for world peace, or rather for harmony in the cosmos.

Jewish history topic of visiting lecturer

"An Evening of Jewish History" with guest lecturer Rabbi Berl Wein, will take place on Sunday, November 8 from 7:10:30 p.m. at the Young Israel, 627 Kirkwood Ave.

Rabbi Wein, spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Torah in Monsey, N.Y. and Rosh Yeshiva of Shaarei Torah, is featured on the Dial-a-Shiur Jewish History tapes. As well, he has lectured all over North America.

The guest speaker's topic, designed to appeal to scholar and layman alike, will cover four areas: the Historical Origin of the State of Israel; False Messiahs in Jewish History; the Age of Enlightenment — Emancipation in the 18th and 19th Centuries; and Jewish-Christian Relationships throughout the Ages.

Tom Caplan, ticket chairman of the event, says, "Jewish history is a fascinating subject — and with Rabbi Wein's wit, expertise and knowledge on the subject, it is an evening not to be missed."

"An Evening of Jewish History" is co-sponsored by the Jewish Youth Library and Young Israel of Ottawa. The cost of $10. per person, $18. per couple and $5. per student includes a soup and salad bar. Reservations can be made by calling 729-9256 or 722-0858.

Biggest hurdle: inequalitarian structure of a 'get'

Rabbis unite to solve issue of Jewish divorce

By Rabbi Haskel Lookstein (JTA) There is good news for 5748. The year 5747 saw a first in the New York Jewish community: Rabbis of all different viewpoints worked together on a religious problem and brought it closer to a solution.

The problem we faced is vexing: How to enable all Jews to marry freely with each other. One of the reasons the problem exists is that about 25 percent of Jewish marriages today end in divorce. Most of the divorced couples obtain only a civil divorce. They do not arrange for a get (religious divorce).

Divorcees remarry

Most divorcees marry a second time. That marriage is invalid according to Orthodox and Conservative Jews unless a get has been obtained to end the first marriage. In such a case, the children of that second marriage are considered mamzeirim (illegitimate) according to Torah law and are ineligible to marry other Jews except for other mamzeirim.

The problem is exacerbated by a number of factors. First, most Jews do not even know what a get is. Second, most Reform and Reconstructionist rabbis do not require a get as a prerequisite for remarriage.

In addition, when a candidate for remarriage suddenly needs a get, her — or his — former spouse may be uncooperative, vindictive or demand money to gain compliance (would any sum not be outrageous?). The aggrieved party then has two unacceptable choices: to marry contrary to Jewish law, at least as far as Orthodox and Conservative Jews understand it, or to remain single agunah.

A committee of the New York Board of Rabbis was authorized to propose a resolution to solve this problem. The participants included Rabbis Gunter Hirschberg and Marc Gelman (Reform), Gilbert Rosenthal and Allan Blaine (Conservative), Robert Aronowitz (Reconstructionist) and Marc Angel and myself (Orthodox). We were all united on the desire to solve the problem.

The biggest hurdle was the inequalitarian structure of a get (the man gives it; the woman accepts it).

Some suggested that if we could egalitarianize the document there would be no problem. Others countered that if we did that there would be no get at all.

We decided together — and some of my colleagues compromised greatly on this — that as important as egalitarianism may be as a religious principle for some of us, the ability of all our children to marry freely among each other was of greater import to all of us.

Three part resolution

The resolution, which was passed both unanimously and enthusiastically by the Board on May 13, 1987 contained the following three parts:

- We called upon every rabbi to counsel his (or her) congregants that in the event of a civil divorce the congregant should make certain to arrange for a Jewish divorce — get — from a religiously recognized tribunal authorized to issue such a document.

- We called upon synagogues and the wider community to take sanctions against any divorced person who refused to co-operate with a former spouse who wishes to obtain a get. Such sanctions would include the withholding from such a person of any honours or privileges within a congregation, or any office holding or honours in the wider community.

- We suggested that rabbis encourage couples who are about to be married to sign a prenuptial agreement providing that in the event, God forbid, that the marriage ends in a civil divorce, the husband and wife will co-operate in the giving and receiving of a get.

This resolution was made possible by a spirit of mutual love and respect which members of the New York Board of Rabbis have for each other. We do not obscure our differences. But we accept each other as idealistic proponents of differing points of view arrived at by deep religious convictions.

In most areas we simply agree to disagree. But on the issue of get we saw a problem which threatens to divide our people into two groups, the members of which will not be able to marry each other. Because our commitment to the Jewish people as a whole transcends whatever adjective may be prefixed to our interpretation of Judaism, we acted as one and we hope that other boards of rabbis will do the same.

In this season of the year we all recite the same prayer: "May all be bound together as one to perform Thy will with a full heart."

May this be fulfilled for all Jews this year and for many years to come.

Enemy in the Promised Land

By Sana Hasan

Random House, 355 pages, $27.75 (cloth)

Egyptian born and raised Sana Hasan, wife of a previous ambassador to Canada, Tashin Basheer, daughter of Egypt's first ambassador to the United States, is a person who refuses to assume the traditionally passive role assigned to Moslem, Arab women.

As a pampered child of an upper middle class Cairo family, she spent many summers in Bad Gastein, an Austrian mountain spa. Here she met her first Israeli friend, Dany. They climbed trees and went on long hikes until Hasan's mother caught them: "Our daughter doesn't talk to a Zionist."

Repelled by the sinister hiss in her mother's voice, Hasan who already had a track record for defiance, began her long love affair with the enemy, determined to find out for herself if the Israelis lurking beyond the border were really the monsters Egyptians believed they were.

In 1974, as a graduate student in political science at Harvard University, Hasan rejected all stereotyping in the quest of a larger search, when she published an article in The New York Times, entitled, "An Egyptian's Vision of Peace."

The article was highly criticized in the Arab press but Hasan didn't care. She left her husband whom, she discloses, was old enough to be her father and set out for Israel, a six-week trip, which was to last three years.

snatchers"), she correctly concludes that she is more accepting of the State of Israel in terms of her understanding of history than the ultra-orthodox.

Intuitively, she strikes at the heart of one of Israel's biggest problems as she postulates the difficulties of maintaining the status quo in Israel where theocracy continually battles with democracy.

Her second right wing encounter is with Knesset member Geula Cohen, one time fighter for the Irgun and also the Lechi, under the command of Abraham Stern.

While the Irgun claimed both sides of the Jordan for the Israelis, Lechi's platform called for the re-establishment of the region's borders extending, "from the Nile to the Euphrates."

Cohen lectures Hasan on her personal story of struggle for a safe Jewish homeland in the Middle East, because she thinks Hasan might help her.

Yet, Hasan bravely calls herself an enemy in the Promised Land in order to acknowledge historical fact concurrent with the geopolitical problems of the modern Israeli state.

Perhaps the most revelatory chapters are her two intense right-wing encounters.

Hiding her Egyptian identity, she lives for a whole month with an ultra-orthodox family in Jerusalem's Mea Shearim.

The family, members of the Neturei Karta, believe Hasan is a wayward Reform Jew whom they need to convert to an orthodox Jewess. Neturei Karta do not accept the official existence of the modern State of Israel. They do not pay taxes nor do they serve in the army. They are waiting for the deliverance of the Jews to the Biblical Promised Land by the Messiah whom they believe is yet to come.

As Hasan departs from the love and warmth of their closed, zealous life (she actually calls them the "soul-

Two of Cohen's fellow freedom fighters from Lechi, condemned to death at the time of England's mandate over Palestine for their part in the assassination of Lord Moyne, then British High Commissioner in Egypt, are buried in Cairo.

Cohen had hoped Hasan would smuggle their corpses out of Egypt.

Cohen's respect for the dead, buried decades ago, moves Hasan but she still refuses to assist Cohen. However, this intense exposure to the flesh of the Israeli soul makes Hasan increasingly Israel-sensitive.

Sana Hasan's first book on the Arab-Israeli conflict, Between Enemies, co-authored with Amos Elon foreshadowed this second important attempt at Arab-Israeli dialogue.

Having received her Ph.D. from Harvard in political science in 1984, Hasan currently is a visiting scholar at Hebrew University's Institute for Advanced Studies in Jerusalem.

Canadian Jews respond to world poverty through JAD/Canada

On July 26, 1987, twenty interested individuals and community leaders met in Larimac, Quebec to draft the constitution for a new national Jewish agency which will help communities in the Third World sustain social and economic development.

The organization, called the Jewish Association for Development (also known as JAD/Canada) intends to enable Canadian Jews to get involved in all stages of development projects, from fundraising at home to work in the field. At least initially, priority will be given to activities in support of small industry, agricultural production and refugee settlement. Projects will be located in Third World Countries in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

Interim executive

An interim executive has been working since January in collaboration with a small but growing nucleus of supporting members. The three interim Directors, individuals with impressive credentials in the development field, are Dr. Michael Rosberg, Program Manager for Latin America with the Cooperative Union of Canada, Dr. Alan Maslove of Carleton University's School of Public Administration and Paul Puritt, International Program Officer with the Canadian Labour Congress.

Why JAD/Canada...and why now? In recent years, the needs of the less fortunate around the world have become an urgent demand on the world's conscience to which many Canadian Jews have responded, both as individuals and as supporters of various organizations. But until now there have been no uniquely Jewish organization to reflect this commitment or to speak about development and Third World issues with a Canadian Jewish perspective within this country and internationally.

While the headquarters of the organization will be in Ottawa, Michael Rosberg was emphatic about its national character.

Cross Canada link

"JAD/Canada intends to support development efforts of local communities in the Third World by linking them to local Jewish organizations across Canada, whether they be youth groups on campus, synagogue social action committees, women's groups, community councils or just dedicated groups that have formed themselves expressly for this purpose," he said.

"The national office will have the experience and expertise to find the projects and offer supporting services, but it will largely be up to local groups in Canada to fund and manage both development projects overseas and education programs at home".

Important partner

Another important partner in the process will often be Jewish communities in the Third World, who are being asked to identify projects, monitor activities and, where possible, to help provide technical or financial resources. The model project will see concerned Jews from Canada and abroad working together to improve the lives of the world's disadvantaged. It is also envisioned that Israel may eventually become a partner, particularly through its technical expertise in fields like dry-lands agriculture and refugee settlement.

JAD/Canada is planning to convene a national meeting early in 1988 for the purpose of adopting its constitution and electing its first Board of Directors. It is hoped that major Jewish communities and organizations, which have already been approached on this initiative, will be represented on the Board. In the meantime, it is eager to hear from individuals and groups who would like to know more about participating, and possibly becoming founding members within their own communities.

For more information, contact JAD/Canada either at 151 Chapel St., Ottawa, K1N 7Y2 or (613) 235-8238.

A Rabbinical View of Duty to Elderly

Dr. Rabbi Reuven P. Bulka, spiritual leader of Machzikei Hadas Congregation, sums up our spiritual obligations to our elderly in a single word.

Respect!

Respect for their age. Respect for their knowledge and experience. Respect for their health and welfare.

The following are excerpts of his comments in an interview for this column:

Rabbi Bulka — "It is very important to recognize that Jewish life revolves around a fundamental respect for men and women as they grow older. For example, there is the recognition that when an older person enters a bus, younger people get up and provide a seat. Jewish tradition goes further. When an individual reaches a venerable age, it is a religious obligation on the part of everybody present to stand up until the elderly person is seated, or passes out of sight, out of respect for that person.

"We all recognize that when the Torah is brought out the entire congregation stands up out of respect for the Torah. We fail to recognize that our tradition requires the same respect must be paid to an individual by virtue of his or her advanced years. In fact, you don't really have to know their years — if there is a chance they have reached their 70's they are entitled to this show of respect.

"The Bible emphasizes that you should stand up to show your respect for the elderly regardless of apparent age.

"The only other exception under Jewish law is that you should also stand up for our 'sages', regardless of age. If you should visit a yeshiva, for example, you will notice the students or visitors will stand to show respect when their rabbi or teacher enters a room.

"There is a fundamental notion, which I think is the cornerstone of any approach we have in Jewish life, that is the notion of respect that must be paid to individuals who have gone through many years of their life.

"I believe this is diametrically opposed to a society that places the emphasis on youth, athletic prowess and other popular activities of the young who are living at the modern 'fast pace'. This notion has become part of our society and that is diametrically opposed to the tradition of our teachings.

"It makes more sense to be reserved at the birth of a child, and be more enthusiastic at the advancement of life. It means the 'Voyage of Life' has been successful in achieving life's mission.

"In other words, many of today's attitudes should be reversed, with emphasis acknowledging past achievements of our elderly generation. In contrast to youth, many of the elderly have a different outlook, tempered by experience, about things they know, and can identify the really important things in life, and recognize those things which may seem important in passing, but are often a waste of time and effort.

"For we know that by and large persons who have attained the age of 65 or over, have passed the stage of 'ego kicks' and in general have reached the point in time that they do not look for rewards and gratitude. They do not need 'a second term in office' but rather are content in utilizing their ability and experience for the good of everybody, without the need of selfish gain.

It is sad but true, that many of our elders are no longer blessed with their full wits, but we must still accord these individuals the full respect due them because of the advanced years. The Talmud points out clearly that all of the elderly, no matter their physical or mental condition, must be accorded the fullest respect solely because of their advanced years.

"Even in our religious institutions age often becomes a handicap. Whoever heard of a rabbi of over 50 being appointed to head a congregation. But on the other hand in the classical Jewish tradition, even today, a yeshiva will not hesitate to appoint an elderly sage over a younger man to head these institutions of Jewish learning. Prominent Palestinian 'dove' to deliver address on November 26

By Simon Rosenblum

Hanna Siniora, probably the best known independent Palestinian spokesperson on the West Bank, will speak on Thursday, November 26, 8:00 p.m. at the Jewish Community Centre, 151 Chapel St.

Siniora will be on a North American tour of Jewish communities, being sponsored by Friends of Peace Now (Shalom Achshav).

A man who is willing to go out on a limb in proposing compromise to both Israelis and Palestinians, Siniora is considered by many to be a unique bridge between the "two solitudes" that constitute Israel and the occupied territories.

In July 1985, as editor-in-chief of Al-Fajr, a major daily Arab newspaper based in Jerusalem and publishing a weekly English edition, he was one of the two Palestinians approved by both the Israeli government and the PLO to represent Palestinians in a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation to peace talks.

Although the talks were aborted, the initiative established Siniora as a highly respected intermediary among various parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

More recently, Siniora became a daily figure on Israeli television with his announcement to run for city council in Jerusalem.

Due to enormous pressure from both Palestinians and Israelis, Siniora later withdrew his candidacy.

Of late, there has been increased discussion of a reconciliation between Israel and Palestinians based on the themes of mutual recognition and self-determination. Even a Likud Member of Knesset has entered into these semi-public negotiations. Because of his independent stance and the respect in which he is widely held, Siniora is expected to play a key role in this reconciliation process.

Siniora has braved the wrath of almost everyone by declaring that the leaders of the two societies, whether it be Peres or Arafat, have not yet had the vision — what Siniora calls the "pioneer spirit" — to bring about peace.

Straightforward view

His point of view is straightforward. To his own people, the Palestinians, he has said: "I believe an end to the Israeli occupation of the territories can happen by political means and not through the use of force. Force has failed in the past to achieve a solution to the Palestinian-Israeli problem...I am realistic enough to understand that Israel is a reality, and we have to face this reality. By we, I mean the Palestinians and the PLO."

Siniora has been no less blunt to Israelis, saying: "Israelis don't understand that they are facing a rare, unprecedented opportunity for peace...To Peres' credit, he is the first Israeli prime minister to say publicly that he recognizes the fact of a Palestinian people. Yet, at the same time, he still refuses to acknowledge their political rights and national aspirations. He is vainly searching for a third-party solution."

Some Palestinians think Siniora is too conciliatory. Some Israelis, such as extremists in the Meir Kahane camp believe he has lived too long.

National Convention vote alters organization name

At a meeting of the 8th Triennial National Convention of Pioneer Women's Organization (Na'amat Pioneer Women), held at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, Ontario September 13-15, 1987, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

That the organization henceforth be known as Na'amat Canada Inc. Na'amat is an acronym of the Hebrew words 'nashim ovdot umitnadvot' (the movement of working women and volunteers).

The resolution was in keeping with the name change of other national branches of the world's largest international women's organization.

Rachel Bessin Hochman Fund is established on her 99th birthday

By Tesse Schechter

Rachel Bessin Hochman, our mother, has reached her 99th birthday. In honour of this milestone, the Rachel Bessin Hochman Endowment Fund has been established by Tesse and Nathan Schechter and their children Corinne, Murray and Joel.

Rachel Bessin Hochman was born and educated in Mir, Russia. In 1903 she came to Canada at the age of 15 where she met and fell in love with our father, the late Moses Bessin, of blessed memory. They were very happy and had a family of eight children. Her husband, who was several years her senior, passed away at the young age of 42.

Mother Rachel or Bobbie Rachel, as she is most affectionately called, carried on the family business as well as raising a large family single-handedly. A very religious woman, she was Shomer Shabbos all her life and always found time for many worthwhile causes both in and outside the community.

Bobbie Rachel was interested and active in Adath Jeshurun Synagogue, referred to as the 'King Street Shul'. She was often consulted and helped many people in distress. A member of the Hebrew Free Loan Society and Hadassah-WIZO, she also organized the first Mizrahi chapter in Ottawa and founded the Rachel Kizell Chapter.

As the first Canadian national president of Mizrahi, she helped to establish chapters in most of the major cities of Canada.

When we think of Mother Rachel we think of the words kindness, generosity and humility. We think of the strong moral values she taught her

Most of us marvel at her tremendous energy. This can be attributed to her deep and abiding faith. She always said in the most difficult days "Got Vel Unz Helfun", (G-d will help us).

The Officers and Directors of the Ottawa Jewish Community Foundation welcome the establishment of the Rachel Bessin Hochman Endowment Fund and wish her many years of good health to enjoy seeing the fund grow.

The Rachel Bessin Hochman Endowment Fund will be opened and family and friends may add to it at any time. The capital will be invested in perpetuity and only the interest used for charitable purposes that will benefit the Ottawa Jewish community.

N.C.S.Y.: New youth group on the scene

By Shelley Samel
and Karen Ranch

A new youth group has been started in the city in association with the National Conference of Synagogue Youth. N.C.S.Y. has two age groups: grades 7 and 8 have over 80 kids involved; the High School group has yet to finish counting heads but also has a lot of teens interested.

Last year we had many successful activities, such as skating and our own Purim carnival at Beth Shalom West Synagogue which was a great fundraiser. Our major activity last year was a Shabbaton which took place in Montreal (Cote St. Luc) at Congregation Beth Israel. This event brought together students from Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and, of course, Ottawa. Our group alone was 20 students.

The theme of the Shabbaton was "I Am My Brother's Keeper", and discussions led by numerous youth advisors focused on this theme. Another focal point of this weekend was the band brought in from New York, Stock Rock.

This year we've already had a terrific opening activity for grades 7 and 8, a "Battle of the Network Stars" evening which included dinner and elections. Our big upcoming event is a Shabbaton at Beth Shalom West for all students in grades 8 and up, on the weekend of November 13-15. Students from Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton and Kingston will also be participating. We promise that it will be a fun-filled weekend of activities for everyone. For more information, call Shelley Samel (829-2255), Rabbi Sonnenchein (232-3501) or Mr. Jim Hassan (723-0519).

N.C.S.Y. for High School teens will be holding a "Club Night" on Saturday, October 24 at 8:00 at Beth Shalom West. Anyone who wants, by himself or with a friend, can put on an act, tell jokes or do a skit. We will also be doing improvisation. Elections of our new executive for the coming year will also take place that night.

With a lot of contributions from many adults, N.C.S.Y. has successfully been launched and is on its way to being an active part of the youth scene. We hope to see you at upcoming events.

B'nai Brith Youth Organization

for 13-18 year olds

The B'nai Brith Youth Organization (B.B.Y.O.) has had an early start this year in Ottawa. Since September we've managed to have some major and most successful programs. Spirit has increased, as has membership, and a new chapter has evolved, consisting of dedicated and enthusiastic participants.

B.B.Y.O. this year is focusing on having entertaining, educational, social and religiously-oriented programs on a consistent basis. We hope to reach Jewish youth who are unaffiliated, and are looking to meet new friends, and offer some spice, variety and companionship to the "new" B.B.Y.O.er.

B.B.Y.O. meets every two weeks and all programs are planned, implemented and led by the youth themselves. Meetings are held either at a member's house or at the Jewish Community Campus (881 Broadview) and are usually followed by a program or 'pigout' which everyone is invited and urged to join.

Being a member of the world's largest Jewish youth organization gives participants an opportunity to meet kids internationally (at their own peer level) and engage in programs in other cities. For example, in the Lake Ontario Region (LOR) the cities include, Ottawa, Kingston, Watertown, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Niagara Falls, Syracuse, Buffalo and Rochester.

If you want any more information or want to be a part of our programs call: Eli Carmel — Ottawa Council for Girls — 230-1119, David Stubina — Ottawa Council for Boys — 726-0720, Lysa Springer — Ottawa Area Director — 232-7306. P.S. Call NOW to see if you're on our mailing list.

Israeli communications expert discusses Israel and the media

If, as a Canadian Jew, you were disturbed by the images of the Israeli-Lebanese War shown on your television screen; if you felt you had to defend Israel's actions to your fellow workers and friends; if you still are uneasy when reference is made to Israel's "responsibility" for the Sabra and Shatilla massacres — then, you should be present at a lecture by Israeli Professor Dov Shinar on Wednesday, November 4 at 8:00 p.m. at the Jewish Community Centre.

Professor Shinar's topic is: "Israel Through the World

Mass-Media: Forty Years of Communication". He is uniquely qualified to discuss Israel and its image in the media. Professor Shinar is a visiting scholar-in-residence in the Department of Communications Studies at Concordia University, on leave from his position as Lecturer at the Communications Institute of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. His expertise is in communications, particularly as it impacts on social behavior. His forthcoming book, Communications and Nation Building in the West Bank explores the role of the media in influencing events in the Middle East. In his lecture he will be discussing the evolving image of Israel which the mass-media has presented during the 40 years of her existence.

An exciting added feature to this evening on Israel and the media will be the premiere showing of a new film entitled, The Cameras Are There. Produced by the Israeli Foreign Office, it is an analysis of The New York Times, coverage of the Israeli-Lebanese War. It offers some surprising insights about the concept of journalistic objectivity.

Volunteers make Blood Donor clinic a tremendous success

They came out as singles, pairs, and families September 29 for the Second Annual High Holy Days Blood Donor Clinic and Tay-Sachs Testing Clinic. The Clinic, co-sponsored by the Jewish Community Centre, Agudath Israel Men's Club, National Capital Region B'nai Brith, and JSU/Hillel, was a great success. The Red Cross collected 65 units of blood, with an additional 23 people being turned away for medical reasons, and 91 individuals were tested for Tay-Sachs Disease. The blood samples for the Tay-Sachs test were centrifuged on site by two technicians from the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario, and were then shipped to Toronto for processing at Sick Children's Hospital. Results should be back within 6 weeks.

A special note of thanks is due to Sandee Goldstein of B'nai Brith, her staff, and Bytown, Parliament, and Ottawa Lodges, who supplied all the food and drink for the Clinic, plus a food tray for the volunteers and staff. B'nai Brith volunteers manned the food tables, picked up and delivered goods for the Clinic, and really brought out the donors! As well, Ottawa Chapter B'nai Brith Women aided the Clinic by resting, timing, and registering blood donors.

Clinic Chairman Horace Philipp has indicated his wish to see the Third Annual Clinic take place next year, again between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. Community support was excellent, and hopefully next year's Clinic will be even bigger and better! Everyone's participation was appreciated, whether or not they were able to donate blood. If you're interested in being on next year's committee, call Shelley Rabinovitch at the J.C.C., 232-7306, to register.

Eddie Greenspan will enliven breakfast

Arts Alive features colourful speakers

Eddie Greenspan, one of Canada's most colourful and controversial lawyers and author of the autobiography, Greenspan: In Defense Of, will be the breakfast speaker at Arts Alive '87 on Sunday, November 22 at 9:30 a.m. at the Jewish Community Centre. (As you are entertained by his comments, you will also enjoy sampling one of Alyce Baker's recipes from her new cookbook, Always In Good Taste.) Mr. Greenspan's book, co-authored by the award-winning writer of Vengeance, George Jonas, portrays his passion for "a proper place for human rights in the legal process and the judicial system". He writes about some of his own cases, ranging from dramatic murder trials to relatively unknown cases. Woven into the narrative are Greenspan's comments on legal issues, social power, parole, and plea bargaining.

Eddie Greenspan practices law in Toronto with the firm, Greenspan Rosenberg Baristers. He is a popular lecturer — "sought after as an ally and avoided as an adversary".

Under the leadership of Chairman Nina Arron and Vice-chairman Sharri Ritter, the Arts Alive committee has been working hard preparing for this exciting cultural festival.

Arts Alive '87 will open Saturday evening, November 21, with a concert by Theodore Bikel. Other speakers on Sunday's full day of programs include Dr. Saul Levine, Rabbi Reuven Bulka, and Blu Greenberg. As well there is a special program planned for teens on Saturday night and a variety of children's activities all day Sunday. (See the Arts Alive ad for details.)

Arts Alive will also be featuring an artisan's exhibit, community booths with Chanuka gift items, and Israeli treats at the Dizengoff Cafe. The Book Fair has now expanded to include religious books, and family life education. A highlight of this year's Book Fair also, is a greatly expanded Israeli literature section in honour of Israel's 40th anniversary year.

The Kinneret

Newsletter

Hello from Kinneret!

Hello and welcome to another great year of B'nai Brith Youth Organization. We at Kinneret chapter A/A hope that you all had a good summer and are looking forward to this year.

In those of you who are new and are not familiar with B.B.Y.O., we are an international organization with chapters in major cities across the world. Ottawa is part of Lake Ontario Region (LOR), which includes the cities of Toronto, London, Kingston, Rochester, Buffalo and Hamilton among others. In Ottawa, the Aleph Zadik Aleph (the male) portion of B.B.Y.O. is represented by Kinneret chapter.

Our executive has been busy working to organize things for this year. They recently attended a Regional Conference for chapter executive members in Toronto and have brought back with them what look like some really good programs that are sure to please. Our plans include social programs (including co-ed ones), athletics, and informative programs including speakers and workshops, just to name a few.

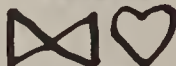

For all those of you who are thinking about joining B.B.Y.O., we've put together an incentive package to make your decision a little easier. Our package is called Kinneret "Don't Pay A Cent Event!".

We would like you to come out to all of Kinneret's programs, and enjoy full membership status until October 25th without paying membership dues. This way, you will be able to try out the organization, and see how much you like it without committing yourself. If you decide you like B.B.Y.O., pay your dues and join the organization; if not, (which will be rare!) you are not committed.

Ah! Conventions! These are by far one of the highlights of B.B.Y.O., as many members will agree. There are, as usual, three conventions this year, and the first one is fast approaching. This is the famous Beauheart, and will be taking place on the weekend of October 30th to November 1st, in Toronto. Beauheart is the most popular of the conventions, and is highlighted by the formal Beauheart Ball. The convention is open to all paid members of B.B.Y.O. More information (such as final cost) will be available shortly.

This is all the news we have for you. So, we would like to take this opportunity before closing to wish you and your families a very happy New Year, and the best of luck in the coming year. We hope to see all of you at our opening program! T'shanah Tovah!

Sadinsky In Right

Ian R. Sadinsky

Hockey Hotbed

For many years I have been a sports traditionalist. Kids played baseball, football, hockey and basketball. Other sports like tennis and volleyball were classified with non-sporting activities such as curling, bowling, and snooker.

I suffered quietly as the older sports gave way to new-fangled imposters — the greatest of which was floor hockey. Oh, the pain of seeing gifted athletes like Dean Ross wasting away at this pastime, wasting precious hours that could have been spent running layups or learning how to "button hook"!

But my conversion is near. At the urging of Murray Ages, I went out Sunday afternoon to watch the boys play hockey on hardwood. After three hours of watching kids ranging from little Louis Kardash (son of David "Bear" Kardash) right up to rangy defenceman Josh Max (son of Mark and Yanda Max), I am almost a believer. The game is fast, it is hard-hitting, and it is fun.

Coaches like Ages, Kardash, and Steve Greenberg are teaching the boys some fundamentals while they chase after a plastic-simulation puck. Parents like Bram Poterchin, Chuck and Bonnie Merowitz, and Levi Reiss check out the action every Sunday at Broadview Campus as little dynamos like Benjy Elkin and Noah Molot go through their paces.

And Dean Ross? Only one of the MVPs in this year's Ottawa Jewish Men's Softball League! I guess there really is some symmetry in sports.

Soccer Star

Another up-and-coming sport is soccer (I still can't call it "football") and one of the local stars is David Nadelle, son of Judge Jack and Diane Nadelle. David, who you read about last year because of his hockey prowess with the Blackburn Stringers, was a member of this year's West Ottawa Juventus Major Bantam team which went to the semi-finals of the prestigious Robbie Tournament, the top tournament in North America! Along the way, Juventus beat a team from Scotland and two undefeated teams from Toronto. David started every game at left wing and was not out of place in the international big-time. So a tip of the SIR cap this week to David Nadelle!

Golfing for Dollars

Golfing great Bill Holzman reports that he raised $6,000 for the Canadian Maccabiah organization by playing 66 holes of golf this summer out in Vancouver against 63 other players in a golfing marathon.

Youngsters interested in the Chicago Maccabiah games next August in Chicago should contact Greg Richards at the J.C.C. immediately as plans are well under way.

That's SIR for now. See you in two!

Habonim Dror: It's not just another Youth Group — It's a World-wide Youth Movement

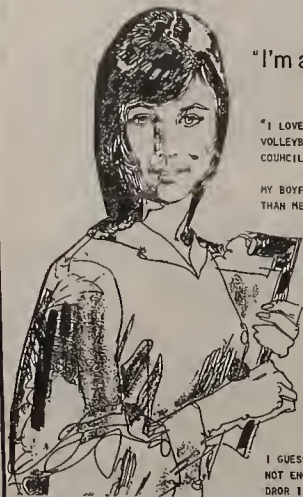

Habonim Dror Ottawa is part of a world-wide organization of young people dedicated to the advancement of Jewish Youth. Our entire membership is comprised of "youth" — from the youngest member to the most senior manager and programming director. This fact, combined with our purpose makes us the only true Youth Movement in this city.

We have our own summer camps, sponsor trips to Israel, and hold seminars and meetings throughout the year. Our organization has a history of making a difference. From helping to found and strengthen a modern nation, to helping the poor and needy, our ideals have kept us active. And even when all we want to do is spend a fun evening with friends — Habonim Dror is there.

If you or someone you know would like to find out more about Habonim Dror's activities, call our programming info-line...725-2587.

"I'm a STUDENT in High School..."

"I LOVE GOING TO SCHOOL. MY GRADES ARE EXCELLENT, I'M ON THE VOLLEYBALL AND SWIMMING TEAMS AND I'VE BEEN ON THE STUDENTS' COUNCIL FOR THREE YEARS RUNNING.

MY BOYFRIEND GOES TO MY SCHOOL AS WELL (HE'S A GRADE HIGHER THAN ME) — BUT GUESS WHAT? I DIDN'T MEET HIM AT SCHOOL ...
...IN FACT I NEVER NOTICED HIM UNTIL I SAW HIM AT HABONIM DROR.

MY DAD (WHO IS A BUSINESSMAN) THINKS I LIKE HABONIM DROR BECAUSE I'M LEARNING SO MUCH ABOUT LEADERSHIP AND ORGANIZATION. AND MY MOM (A TRAVEL AGENT) SUSPECTS MY MOTIVATION IS SOCIALIZING WITH THE NICE PEOPLE — ESPECIALLY MY BOYFRIEND.

WELL THEY'RE BOTH RIGHT. SOME OF THE OTHER THINGS I LIKE ARE THE WEEKEND SEMINARS IN THE COUNTRYSIDE, MEETING PEOPLE FROM OTHER PLACES, AND THE WAY IT GIVES ME SOMETHING TO DO OTHER THAN STANDING IN THE MULL.

I GUESS IT COMES RIGHT DOWN TO THE SIMPLE FACT THAT SCHOOL IS NOT ENOUGH. DON'T GET ME WRONG; I LOVE SCHOOL, BUT AT HABONIM DROR I GET TO HAVE FUN!"

FOR UP-TO-DATE INFORMATION ON HABONIM DROR'S PROGRAMS CALL 725-2587.

Dr. Truda Rosenberg (right) is shown presenting a painting by her late husband Dr. Imre Rosenberg to Rabbi Irwin Tanenbaum. (Photo by Ezra Miller).

Temple Israel given Imre Rosenberg work

Dr. Truda Rosenberg recently presented Temple Israel with a painting executed by her late husband, Dr. Imre Rosenberg.

The pen and ink work of a Bet Hamidrash in Haifa, Israel, will be reproduced for presentation to every Bar and Bat Mitzvah student of the Temple Israel Religious School.

The reproduction will be affixed inside the front cover of "A Treasury of Jewish Literature" edited by Gloria Gol-dreich, and will bear the inscription "In memory of Imre Yitzhak Rosenberg who wished the Torah perpetuated and beauty enjoyed."

Dr. Rosenberg explained that her choice of the particular piece of art by her late husband was based on the fact that, in perpetuating his memory, she wants to reinforce in the minds of students the importance of study as well as the importance of the Jews as the "People of the Book".
